It can be as basic as the conversion of electrical energy to heat to make the morning coffee or as complex as plotting a space shuttle flight from Earth into orbit. Research is an integral part of Khwopa College. Since, the college offers 4 Master's Degree Programs, research is also a part of the curriculum of each program. Research sections of all the programs operate under the Research Management Cell (RMC), which is supported by University Grants Commission (UGC). RMC, with coordination of the Master's Degree Programs publishes various journals and collections of research articles. The list of publications includes Khwopa Economica (2012), a collection of research articles related to Economics. The articles were contributed by faculties and students of MA Economics. Another publication that the RMC has endeavored is a multidisciplinary journal, Khwopa Journal. Its publication started in 2014 and two volumes have already been published. Articles from all four Master Degree Programs are included in both the volumes. The third volume of the journal is on the verge of population. The publication of this journal is targeted for one volume in every six months. Recently, a collection of abstracts of theses of the students of MSc Environmental Science, Khwopa Abstract (2016) was published. This collection includes more than 150 abstracts. Khwopa College keeps a remarkable space for any kind of academic publication.

Global warming is real, it is not a hoax. Anthropogenic climate change is showing its true color. Glacier melting, massive floods, erratic rainfalls and droughts are wreaking havocs in livelihood of people, especially in developing countries like Nepal. Time is tricking; appropriate measures need to be taken to mitigate the effect. We, at Khwopa College, Department of Environment Science endeavor to produce skilled Environmental Scientists who can tackle such environmental issues both on local and global scales. Sunil Suwal, Incharge of BBM

Economics is a broad subject that can be useful for how decisions are made, how market works, how policies and regulations affect outcomes and how economic forces that drive social systems will equip people to make better decisions and solve the economic and social problems in daily lives. Broadly, an economics degree helps you to prepare for a career that requires analytical and problem-solving skills such as business planning, finding research gaps to run the research and formulating macroeconomic policies.

We focus on presentations, research-based classes, seminars, talk programs and conferences on the subject so that students can learn beyond text books. Don't miss the opportunity to enroll in our master's degree program in Economics so that you can make an extraordinary future in a field of vour interest.
